POPULATION OF THE PHILIPPINES.

CENSUS OF MARCH 2, 1903.

The Philippine archipelago lies entirely within the Tropics, and numbers approximately 3,141 islands and islets, which extend from latitude $4^{\circ} 40'$ to $21^{\circ} 10'$ north, and from east longitude $116^{\circ} 40'$ to $126^{\circ} 34'$. For the general configuration of the islands, and their more detailed topographic features, reference should be had to the maps and relief models prepared by the Rev. José Algué, S. J., which form part of the Philippine exhibit at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. Within this area of 832,968 square miles of land and water dwells a population of 7,635,426 people. Of this number 6,987,686 are civilized, or partly so, while 647,740 are wild and uncivilized, although not without some knowledge of the domestic arts.

The aborigines of the Philippines are believed to be the Negritos, and of these 23,000 still remain. They are found in many, although not all, of the provinces, living in a primitive state. They are very short, the males averaging about 4 feet 10 inches in height, while the females are shorter. Their color is black, their hair is woolly and bushy, their toes are remarkably prehensile, and they can use them almost as well as their fingers. They wear no clothing except a gee string, and live on such food as they can find; they have no fixed habitations or occupations, but wander about in the forests, having but little contact with other people, except when trading. They are skillful in the use of the bow, in throwing stones, and in making a fire, which they do by rubbing together two pieces of dry bamboo. The women, as usual with uncivilized races, do all the work. They are not without a religious belief; the principal deity is the moon. They are very shy and distrustful, and all efforts to civilize them have apparently failed. They probably approach as nearly to the conception of primitive man as any people thus far discovered.

The origin of the Negritos is not known, but from the fact that people of the same type are found in the Malay peninsula and the Andaman Islands, Bay of Bengal, leads to the belief that they once occupied the entire Malay archipelago. With the arrival of the Malays in the Philippines, the Negritos gradually withdrew or were driven away from the coast into the mountains; but they are still found in the provinces of Cagayán, Isabela, Ilocos Norte, Ilocos Sur, Abra, Tayabas, Nueva Écija, Bulacán, Rizal, Tárlac, Zambales, Pampanga, Bataán, the Camarines, Albay, Cápiz, Antique, Negros Occidental, Negros Oriental, Surigao, Sorsogón, and Iloilo. There is probably no doubt that there are Negritos of mixed types in many of the smaller islands.

Of the other wild tribes in the Philippine Islands, one of the most important is the Igorot, which inhabits the central Cordillera from the extreme north of Luzón south to the plains of Pangasinán and Nueva Écija. Under this general name there are various subgroup designations, such as the Gaddans, Dadayags, or Mayoyao. Another branch of the Igorot tribe is the Kalinga, along the Cagayán river, near Ilagan, in the province of Isabela. To the westward, in the sub-province of Bontoc, is another branch of the Igorot people, who are said to be the most famous of the head hunters. Another branch is the Tinguian, inhabiting the provinces of Nueva Écija, Ilocos Sur, Lepanto-Bontoc, and Abra.

In the provinces of Isabela, Nueva Vizcaya, Nueva Écija, and Tayabas there is also a very curious tribe of head hunters, known as the Ibilao, sometimes called Ilongot. In the island of Paragua are the Tagbanuas and Bataks; in Mindoro we have the Mangyans, mixed in some instances with Negritos; and in Mindanao, the Mamanuas or Negritos, Manobos, or river people, Bagobos, Atas, Mandayas, Bukidnon, Subanon, Tiruray, Bilan, Tagabili, Tagakaolo, Yakan, Ilano, Magindanao, Samal, Samal Laut, and Malanao Moros. The Bukidnon are also found in Luzón, Negros, Panay, and Sámar. These tribes have different names, according to locality.

All these people of Mindanao, except the Moros, have the beliefs and ceremonial customs of savages; they take not only the heads of vanquished enemies, but their hands and hearts as well, and offer human sacrifices to their deities; yet, they are by no means savages; they raise maize, mountain rice, taro, and a very fine quality of hemp, which they dye and make into strange and ornamental patterns.

Finally, we have the Moros of Paragua, the Yakan and Samal Moros of Basilan, and the Samals of the Sulu group, who, like those of Mindanao, are Mohammedans. The Moros live in villages, generally along the seashore or some lake, and are famous boat builders; they also manufacture their arms and some cannon, and weave a large amount of cloth; they gather considerable quantities of gutta-percha every year, and those living in the Sulu group are expert pearl divers. They have no political organization, but obey some dato or petty chieftain.

For many years the Moros followed piracy and made incursions and attacks upon all the settlements in the other southern islands, going even to Manila. They carried the Mohammedan religion with them, and, but for the timely arrival of the Spaniards, it is believed that all the people in the islands would have become Mohammedans. They killed, captured, and enslaved large numbers of Filipinos, and slavery, although now prohibited, still exists among them; but under the close supervision of the United States, their piratical and marauding expeditions have ceased. - All the wild tribes, except the Negritos, are of Malay extraction.

Setting aside the intermediate water space, amounting to 717,942 square miles, and considering the land alone, the area is estimated to be 115,026 square miles, or 73,616,640 acres. Of this about 12,000,000 are private lands and over 61,000,000 public land. Of the latter, 40,000,000 or more are forest lands, leaving about 21,000,000 available for agriculture.

Much of the land covered by forests is of great richness, and if cleared would be capable of a very high degree of cultivation. This may be said of nearly all parts of the Philippines, in which the soil is especially adapted to tropical agriculture, producing all kinds of tropical fruits and vegetables and many of those usual to the temperate zone.

Among the products for which the islands are renowned is the fibrous plant, abaca, which grows in many of the provinces, and from which the manila hemp, which is used throughout the world in the form of rope and twine is made. Fine sugar, rice, coffee, cacao, and tobacco are grown, and although the implements and machines used in farming are of the simplest character, nature is so lavish that up to this time they have proved sufficient. A description of the methods and cost of cultivation of the several staples mentioned will be found in the report of the Philippine census, now in course of preparation.

Assuming that the value per acre of forest land will average as high as heretofore, and that there will be no deterioration in quality or diminution in the quantity of the lumber per acre, it is estimated that the forest lands of the Philippines are worth more than $2,000,000,000.

Under existing laws a homestead of 39.54 acres may be acquired by any citizen of the Philippine Islands, while a corporation can acquire 2,530 acres. - The grant or sale of such land is conditioned on actual and continued occupancy, improvement, and cultivation of the premises for a period of not less than five years, during which time the purchaser or grantor can not alienate or encumber said land or the title thereto.

The civilized Filipinos are classified by this census in eight tribes, as follows: The Bicol, Cagayan, Ilocano, Pampangan, Pangasinán, Tagalog, Visayan, and Zambalan, the most numerous of which is the Visayan. The accompanying tables give the population for each of the islands, provinces, municipalities, and barrios as determined by the census.

At the time of the discovery of the Philippines by Magellan, in 1521, the total population is supposed to have numbered about 500,000 persons, who were living in a more or less wild and barbarous state.

Assuming that these figures are approximately correct, and that the census was fairly accurate, it follows that during a period of 382 years the population has multiplied about fifteen times. During the past century it has increased at the average rate of 1.5 per cent per year, the rate in the United States has been 2 per cent per year, and in Java 2.1 per cent per year.

While the great mass of the people are Malays, and probably had a common origin, there is a difference in their written and spoken language, but not much in their customs. For such progress as they have made they are indebted somewhat to the Chinese, with whom they had been in contact for several hundred years before the arrival of the Spaniards, to the Spanish encomenderos,¹ and to the religious orders of the Roman Catholic church, which have played a very prominent part in the Philippines, and have contributed largely toward the civilization of the people and their education in the arts and sciences.

The first to arrive were the Augustinians, who came in 1565. They were followed by the Franciscans in 1577, by the Dominicans in 1587, the Recoletos in 1606, the Paulists in 1862, the Capuchins in 1886, and the Benedictines in 1895. The Jesuits arrived in 1581; they were expelled from all the Spanish colonies in 1768 by order of the King, Carlos III, but returned to the Philippines again in 1859. They have exercised great influence over the higher education of the Filipinos, and have labored long and faithfully among the people of Samar, Leyte, Bohol, Cebú, and the wild tribes of Mindanao, Basilan, and Sulu.

The archipelago was divided into 5 dioceses, and these into 746 regular parishes, 105 mission parishes, and 116 missions, which were administered by the Augustinians, Franciscans, Dominicans, and Recoletos.

Notwithstanding the inestimable services rendered by the friars, they succeeded in exciting the bitter antagonism of the Filipinos, and this feeling of hostility was beyond question a powerful incentive to the revolution of 1896. From this feeling the Jesuits were excepted, probably because they are not friars and took no part in the political government of the islands, and because of their great services in the cause of education.

It is not practicable or necessary to explain in this brief sketch what is known as the "Friar question," because it has been fully stated by the Civil Commission of the Philippine Islands in their several reports to the Government. It is sufficient to say that the sale of the friar lands to the Government has been effected through the efforts of Governor Taft, the Civil Commission, and Monsignore Guidi, the apostolic delegate to the Philippines, and it is now probable that Roman Catholic clergy will substitute a large number of the friars, and that all cause of agitation on their account will be removed.

The Philippine Islands offer many inducements to the immigrant, and for the investment of capital in either large or small amounts. Although within the Tropics, the climate is not detrimental to those who are in good health when they arrive, and who take reasonable care of themselves afterwards.

The report of the census, now in course of preparation, will give full statistics of Philippine industries, and more especially of agriculture. Of manufactures on a large scale, except cigars, there are none, although sugar and hemp in considerable quantities have been exported in past years. The various industrial occupations of the people, their homes, domestic life, and the product of their labor will be found in the Philippine exhibit.

Although one reads and hears many opinions about the native, his dishonesty and incapacity for work, such views are highly colored in some instances, ignorantly expressed in others, and most unjust in others. The Filipinos are not without their faults, but it is only fair to say that they have many qualities which, under proper and permanent influences, will insure their steady progress.

In an address as to the duty of Americans in the Philippines, recently delivered before the Union Reading College, Manila, Governor Taft, in speaking of the Filipinos, said:

Now, I hope I am a reasonable man, and I am not disposed to quarrel with those with whom I differ. I know that the habits of the Filipino servant are trying to the American who first comes to these islands; I know that the laziness and indisposition to hire of the coquero are enough to cause blasphemy. I know that we have had instances of the grossest treachery and cruelty by Filipinos; I know that the Filipino is disposed to conceal his real feelings when in opposition to the person whom he is addressing, and I know that these characteristics are calculated to make the American impatient and condemn the race. When one's feelings of enmity are very much aroused, it is difficult to get the limit to the expression of them. So it is that we have the young lions of the American press, of the three newspapers who are supposed to speak the American public opinion in these islands, holding the Filipino up to contempt, exposing all his supposed vices, and giving him no credit whatever for any virtues, and it may be that this represents the feelings of the majority of the resident Americans in Manila. But can we not, in the end, be just and give to the whole Filipino people their due? Should we wish the Filipino people to judge of Americans by the drunken, truculent American loafers who infest the small towns of these islands, living on the fruits of the labor of Filipino women, and who give us more trouble than any other element in the islands? Should we wish the Filipino people to judge of American standards of honesty by reading the humiliating list of American official and unofficial defaulters in these islands? I think not.

Contrast the Filipinos with other Malays and the Oriental peoples, and I ask you to name a people offering more opportunities for development along the lines which American ideals require, than the people of these islands. To begin with, they are a Christian people, and they have been so for three hundred years. It will not be said that I have been partial to the Spanish friars and the Spanish sovereignty here, but I am anxious to admit in the fullest manner the debt which these people and the world owes to Spain and her friars for Christianizing 7,000,000 of Malays, and giving them, speaking broadly, Christian and modern ideals. It is true that their Christianity sometimes seems different from European or American Christianity, but in forming a subject for the operation of elevating influence, of education, and the environment of civilization, this people is centuries in advance of the Mohammedan or Buddhist. The Mohammedan, the Buddhist, the Chinaman, looks with a sense of superiority on the efforts of the Christian European nation to better his condition. He has no desire for popular government, no longing for individual liberty. He opposes to development of this kind the impenetrable wall of disdain and contempt. The Filipino people as a people have breathed in through their educated leaders the inspirations of liberty and free government. Many of them have fought, bled, and given up their lives in a struggle for independence. It was a mistaken struggle, but their sacrifices and their bravery are worthy our admiration and bespeak a people capable of greater things. Their intense desire for education, their appreciation of European and American improvements in dress and bodily comforts, their artistic ambitions, their quick desire and power to imitate the good they see and understand, their openness to the reception of new and better things, their political aspirations for liberty and popular government, however lacking in a political knowledge of its difficulties and real essence, all these traits, added to a peculiar social sense and charm, make them a people peculiarly subject to the good and developing influence of a friendly and sympathetic government in which they are given a gradually increasing part, and justify an entirely different policy in dealing with them and promoting their welfare from that which England has found it necessary to pursue with Mohammedan and Buddhist peoples, having neither sympathy with, nor understanding of, modern European ideas. * * *

Referring to the capacity of the Filipinos as artisans or laborers, Governor Taft said:

With respect to the possibility of obtaining satisfactory labor from the Filipinos, I have only to say this, that experiments have shown that those who have gone about the matter systematically and have attempted to find out what the native needs to keep him constant in his attendance upon work have been successful, so that, wages considered, his work has been fairly satisfactory. But it is very certain that before satisfactory labor can be obtained from him, he must be under the control of a master who understands him. I know the disposition of most Americans here is to open the doors and let in the Chinese, so that we may have Chinese cheap labor in the islands; but I am emphatically opposed to the general policy of admitting the Chinese, first, because the Filipinos have the strongest opinion that it will be for their detriment, and, second, because I believe the history of the Straits Settlements shows that it will be not for their prosperity as distinguished from the material prosperity of the islands. I am opposed to admitting any Chinese labor until it shall be made to appear that the great works of construction which are essential in the islands can not be carried on satisfactorily with Filipino labor.

We have been successful in securing, and now have, more than 2,500 Filipino laborers at work on the Benguet road. The Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific Company has from six to seven hundred native laborers in their quarries, and Mr. Krusi, of that company, told me they were doing most satisfactory work. The quartermaster's department of the United States army, in Manila, employs about 1,500 Filipinos; the city engineer's department of the city and the street cleaning department of the city employ together probably an equal number, and they all report that the Filipino labor is good. Mr. Higgins, the manager of the Manila and Dagupan Railway Company, who built the original road with Filipino labor, and is now building the branches authorized by the Commission, finds no difficulty with Filipino labor. Mr. Belden, of the street railway company, has had no difficulty in securing the necessary laborers, and they are now at work laying the ties. Captain Couden, of the Cavite navy-yard, submits a favorable report upon his use of Filipino labor, skilled and unskilled.

I venture to say that these citations, until others are shown indicating different condition of affairs, are sufficient to sustain the fact that Filipino labor, when properly managed, can be made to do the work that this country requires—not so well as American or Chinese labor, but fairly well.¹ * * *

Such views from such a source should go far toward removing the impression that Filipinos can not be found to carry on the work, skilled and unskilled, necessary in the industrial development of the islands.— Even if they are not considered equal to the Chinese in the field of labor, they are entitled to a fair trial under American auspices before the question of their relative merits is finally settled.

Physically the Filipinos are of medium size, although large men are found among them, especially in the mountainous parts of the islands. Generally speaking, they are of a brownish color, with black eyes, prominent cheek bones, the nose flat rather than arched or straight, nostrils wide and full, mouth inclined to be large, lips full, good teeth, and round chin. The hair is black and straight, that of the women falling in heavy masses to the knees. The color of the wild tribes is darker than the average civilized Filipino, while the color of the upper class, more especially the mestizos, is much lighter. The children are very attractive and precocious, and learn with surprising readiness.

In regard to other traits, the opinions of Filipinos of themselves are not without interest. To quote one of the race of great intelligence and close observation:

They (the Tagalogs) are of a cheerful and lively temperament, lovers of company, diversion, and pleasures. They profess a deep love of home, and preserve in its purity the faith and religion of their ancestors. They are temperate in eating, modest in dress, and simple in manner. They are pacific, mild, respectful, hospitable, and grateful to those who treat them well; very sensitive, silent, and patient under mistreatment, but quarrelsome and vengeful when a good opportunity offers. They are suspicious of strangers, due to the fact that foreigners, with but few and honored exceptions, have exploited the above-mentioned idiosyncrasies of the people of this region.

Another of the race with equal, if not greater claims to be heard, has said of the Visayans of Negros Oriental:

The population is divided into three social classes. The first is composed of families who, on account of their wealth and culture, enjoy a position of leisure and independence. The second class is composed for the most part of honest and industrious families, possessed of small properties, who are very economical, having but little ambition, lovers of order, and hospitable; they are happy on account of having but few necessities, and enjoy a position relatively comfortable. The third class is formed of the poor, who are the farm laborers, day laborers, servants, fishermen, etc. They are, as a rule, ignorant, and therefore fanatical and superstitious. Their lack of education has created but few necessities, and they are therefore indolent. They are generally sober and strong; most of them eat but twice a day, and their food consists of corn meal cooked with water, and small salted fish, so that the average daily expense of a family in the country is about 25 cents Mexican, and those in the town from 40 to 50 cents Mexican, per day.

In speaking of the Pangasináns, a prominent member of that tribe says:

The inhabitants of this province are, as a rule, industrious, peaceable, patient, law-abiding, and anxious for peace and progress. Almost all of them are Catholics; religious, but not free from superstition. There are no large fortunes here, but neither is pauperism known, because property is very much distributed.

In writing of the Bicol, the governor of the province of Ambos Camarines says:

The masses of the people have in former times had no educational opportunities, and are extremely ignorant and superstitious. They are easily led and controlled by strong leaders, are credulous as children when dealing with persons in whom they have confidence, but shy and suspicious as to strangers. They are a mild tempered, law-abiding, pacifically disposed, and good-humored people, and possess a mental capacity, such that I believe universal education and improved opportunities will raise them to a plane of civilization higher than that occupied by any other Asiatic people.

A very noticeable characteristic of the people here is the aggressiveness displayed by the females and their evident superiority to the males in business capacity. Whenever a family rises from the lower ranks of society to a position of comparative affluence and social importance it is usually found to be due to the tact, energy, and close attention to business of the female member of the matrimonial partnership. The women are, when so inclined, heavier gamblers and users of intoxicants, and more prone to resort to personal violence in settling their differences than are the men. The people generally are socially inclined, extremely fond of music and dancing, in both of which they show great proficiency, and are hospitable to a fault. Their besetting vice is gambling. The passion for play has a strong hold upon all classes, and is productive of many evil results. There appears, however, some ground for the hope that in time, with the spread of education and increase of general knowledge, and with the introduction of athletics and other forms of rational and legitimate sport and amusements, the influence of the "monte" table and the cockpit may be broken; and while it is scarcely to be expected that the gambling evil can be entirely stamped out, it certainly can, by the means above mentioned, be materially decreased.

In speaking of the Ilocanos, one of their number says:

The customs of the natives in their manner of dressing, eating, and bearing are very simple, and in general they are very docile and obedient to the constituted authorities, and so timid that, although they suffer vexations from the persons who exercise some authority in their towns, they seldom complain.

Like all nations in the world, they also have many and varied superstitions; among them may be mentioned the fact that they do not take a bath, marry, or start on a voyage on Thursdays. The raven is a bird of ill omen, and when the raven croaks it is a sign of some misfortune. A gambler, when he meets on his way to the gambling house a woman, returns, because he believes it is a sign of bad luck, etc.

These superstitions, and others of a more injurious nature, prevail generally among the ignorant masses, and are not unlike those which afflict many people in the United States and other countries. It is needless to say that they interfere with the daily affairs of life and are the cause of much unnecessary anxiety and suffering, and sometimes of serious crimes. Fortunately, they will disappear as the people become more intelligent and rational, and therefore less inclined to believe in bogies of any kind.

A great deal more might be written about the Filipinos, but their traits can be better understood by personal contact with them, and by an examination of the many ethnological and historical works on the Philippine Islands.

The islands have been under American control since August, 1898.

The dominant American idea in their government, as expressed by Governor Taft, is that "the Philippines are for the Filipinos," and that whatever is conducive to their advancement, within certain limits, should be adopted, and whatever militates against them should be rejected. They now have quite a large share in the government of the islands, all the municipalities having Filipinos as presidentes, and all the provinces, except nine, having Filipino governors. Under the law for taking the census, enacted July 1, 1902, a legislative assembly is to be established two years after the publication of the census report, provided the islands are at that time in a state of tranquillity; of this there is now no reasonable doubt.

It may be said in conclusion that the Filipinos are generally subordinate to lawful authority, that under competent officers they make excellent soldiers, and in the course of time will make good citizens. In fact, it is not too much to expect that under the guidance of a free, just, and generous government, with the establishment of more rapid and frequent means of communication, and with the general spread of education, the ephemeral tribal distinctions which now exist will gradually disappear, and the Filipinos will become a numerous and homogeneous race, exceeding in intelligence and capacity any other people of the Tropics.

In the foregoing short sketch it is not the purpose to go into details concerning the social, educational, and industrial life of the Filipinos, or to give more than the briefest description of the islands and their vast wealth. It is the intention merely to give such an account of the different tribes as will add interest to the Philippine exhibit, and to introduce the statistics of population, shown in the following tables compiled in the United States Census Bureau from the census schedules, by hand count. These figures may be changed by the more accurate machine count hereafter to be made, and should not be accepted therefore as final results.
